Prof. Dr. Maria Chiara Monti associated as Mercator fellow in RTG
2158

To whom it may concern,

In Research Training Group (RTG) 2158, teams from the fields of pharmacy, chemistry and medicine at Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf are working together to elucidate molecular resistance mechanisms and to search for new active ingredients that can overcome intrinsic or acquired resistance in tumor diseases and infections. The RTG has been funded by the German Research Foundation (DFG) with almost 4 million euros for a further four and a half years.

To this RTG, Prof. Dr. Maria Chiara Monti was associated as Mercator fellow.

The association enables intensive, long-term project-based collaborations between researchers from Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf and Prof. Monti's research group. As a Mercator fellow, Prof. Monti will be integrated into RTG's research and qualification program. As part of this, on-site stays of Prof. Monti at Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf are intended. For these stays, RTG 2158 will reimburse travel and accommodation costs.

Yours sincerely,

Prof. Dr. Holger Gohlke
